Welcome!

Dear participants to the Congress of the Swiss Sociological Association

With a focus on 'Vulnerable Societies: Risks and Responses', this sociological meeting is addressing central issues of our times, characterized by successive crises and major uncertainties as regards the future. The anticipation of risks and efforts to develop responses to them, at the individual and collective levels, run across all domains of social life. Hence, the SSA research committees can offer important insights on how societies and social groups appraise and react to risk and vulnerability, in their respective fields of expertise including education, health, migration or gender to name just a few. In addition, sociological analyses of risk and vulnerability have major applied implications and should inform policies. Therefore, the cooperation between researchers across academic settings and Universities of Applied sciences are crucial to develop analyses and propositions to address current and upcoming societal challenges.

As SSA president, I want to thank the University of Applied Sciences and Arts Northwestern Switzerland, and especially the School of Social Work, for endorsing the organization of this SSA congress. After years of activities affected by the COVID-19 pandemic, we should particularly appreciate the opportunity to meet again in regular circumstances. Congresses provide indeed unique settings to discuss theoretical propositions, to share empirical findings and to maintain the discipline's dynamism. I wish you a lively and stimulating congress.

Claudine Burton-Jeangros, president of the Swiss Sociological Association, April 2024

Welcome!

Dear participants, colleagues, and friends!

Welcome to the 2024 Congress of the Swiss Sociological Association hosted by the University of Applied Sciences and Arts Northwestern Switzerland and organized by the School of Social Work. On behalf of the Director of the School of Social Work FHNW, it is an honor to be the host of this congress for the first time.

The aim of the congress is to highlight a concept that places the inherent vulnerability of individuals and collectives at its epistemological center. The theoretical and empirical significance of the concept of vulnerability has gained interdisciplinary importance in recent years and has inspired people beyond academic boundaries to rethink and reshape interpersonal and intergroup relationships.

This year's theme 'Vulnerable Societies: Risks and Responses' is deeply meaningful to us at the School of Social Work FHNW. As social workers and academics, we are committed to the issue of vulnerability. Addressing the needs and aspirations of vulnerable groups in our society is at the core of our work. Social work and sociology are closely related, with social work often drawing on sociological theories and methods to understand and address social problems. Sociological theories enable social workers to critically analyze the social and cultural factors that influence individuals and communities. Social work contributes to a deeper understanding of the relationship between society and the individual, defined as the analysis of social problems and their effects on individuals, and the description of how organizations deal with these problems. Overall, the relationship between social work and sociology is one of mutual influence and collaboration, with both disciplines contributing to a deeper understanding of social problems and their solutions.

Without the combined efforts of many dedicated individuals and teams, a congress of this magnitude would not be possible. I would like to sincerely thank the congress administration, marketing and website managers, room management, technical support and especially our dedicated colleagues of the scientific committee responsible for the congress topic and program.

We look forward to stimulating and insightful discussions during this congress, exploring issues of risk and responding to vulnerability. It is an opportunity for us to share the results of our research, exchange valuable insights, and foster a dialogue that will shape the course of our mission - to strengthen societal resilience and empower vulnerable groups.

Sibylle Nideröst, Deputy Director, School of Social Work FHNW

A Remedy for Your Data Nightmares

Wednesday, 12.15-13.15, Room 01.W.20

Have you ever faced challenges in retrieving your data from a past research project? Are you encountering difficulties in comprehending the data, dealing with an inaccessible project website, or missing metadata? Are you in search of a secure repository for your sensitive data? Do you wish to make your data, syntax or replication material available? Are you interested in connecting your data with research conducted by other social scientists?

Join us for an engaging session where you can interact with FORS experts and delve into reliable solutions regarding data preservation, sharing, and access within the social sciences. In this presentation, we will first provide an overview of the data archive services offered by FORS, the Swiss Centre of Expertise in the Social Sciences. FORS is a national research infrastructure dedicated to providing data and research information as well as services to social science researchers and academic institutions across Switzerland. Our services are designed to ensure the secure preservation and accessibility of valuable research data and replication materials for the scientific community. After introducing our services, we will present to you SWISSUbase, the platform the FORS data archive uses, enabling researchers to share their quantitative or qualitative data in adherence to the FAIR principles—ensuring data is Findable, Accessible, Interoperable, and Reusable. This platform is not only reliable and sustainable but also has the CoreTrustSeal certification, affirming its integrity and longevity. In the final part, the session participants can ask questions related to their own research project and data. Our expert team is ready to discuss your unique challenges, offering consultations in English, French, or German. Don't miss this opportunity to explore the services FORS offers, including a closer look at SWISSUbase, the platform facilitating these services.

Prof. Dr. Bridget
Anderson

Bridget Anderson is the Director of Migration Mobilities Bristol and Professor of Migration, Mobilities and Citizenship. She takes as her starting point that the ‚migrant‘ and the ‚citizen‘ and the differences between them are constructed in law and in social and political practice. Research also plays an important role in this, raising important ethical, epistemological and political questions. She is interested in the relation between migration, race, and nation, historically and in the contemporary world. Her work explores the relations between migration, temporalities and future making claims, with a particular focus on precarity, labour market flexibilities and citizenship rights.

Prof. Dr. Dorothea Hilhorst

Dorothea Hilhorst is a professor of humanitarian studies at the International Institute for Social Studies (ISS) of Erasmus University in The Hague. She is also the president of the International Humanitarian Studies Association, IHSA. Thea defines humanitarian studies as “the study of societies and vulnerable communities experiencing humanitarian crisis originating from disaster, conflict, refugee situations, and/ or political collapse. It studies the causes and impact of crisis; how people, communities and authorities respond to them, including efforts for prevention and preparedness; how humanitarian action and other external interventions are organized and affect the recovery from crises; and the institutional changes that crises and crisis response engender”. Her focus is on aid-society relations: studying how aid is embedded in the context, impacts on governments and society, and is shaped by the manifold actions of actors in and around programmes for protection, service delivery and capacity development. She has a special interest in the intersections of humanitarianism with development, peacebuilding and gender-relations. Her research programmes have taken place in settings affected by disaster, conflict and fragility, including Afghanistan, Angola, Burundi, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Ethiopia, the Philippines, Rwanda, South Sudan, and Sri Lanka. One of her recent research programme concerns cases where ‘conflict meets disaster’, that studies disaster governance in high-conflict, low-conflict and post-conflict societies. She currently implements an ERC advanced grant programme on humanitarian governance. In 2022, she was awarded the Spinoza Price, the highest scientific distinction in the Netherlands.

Prof. Dr. Jean-Michel Bonvin

Jean-Michel Bonvin is Professor of sociology and socioeconomics at the University of Geneva. His areas of expertise include the welfare state and social policy, labour market policies, organizational innovation in the public and the third sectors, the sociology of work and businesses, and theories of justice, notably the capability approach. He has been involved into various EU and Swiss-funded research projects such as “Capright: Resources, Rights and Capabilities: In Search of Social Foundations for Europe”, “Re-InVEST: Rebuilding an Inclusive, Value-based Europe of Solidarity and Trust through Social Investments” or the NCCR LIVES “Surmonter la vulnérabilité: perspectives du parcours de vie”. He is presently participating into the project “Involve: For trustful, participatory and inclusive public services”. Jean-Michel Bonvin is the author of numerous books and articles in leading peer-review journals such European Societies, Social Policy & Society, Critical Sociology, Policy & Politics, etc. He is a co-editor of the “Dictionnaire de politique sociale suisse” (2020).
